WEEKLY BAZOO.
SEDALIA, Mo.,
TUESDAY, JULY 15, 1884.
CHANGE IN MANAGEMENT.

A telegram which was received in this city yesterday contained the announcement that Fourth Vice-President A. A. Talmage had severed his connection with the Missouri Pacific, and takes charge of the Wabash tomorrow.

The news was received with regret by both officials and employees of the road in this city, as will be seen by a perusal of interviews with them in another column.

Not only is he the ablest railroad man in the western country, but one whose influence has gone abroad and brought him commendation "all along the line."

Self made, having mounted by slow degrees to the success which he has won, he is a man to whom even the masses attribute qualities which mark greatness and to whose indomitable energy and zealous perseverance no man high or low but must give hearty recognition. When he first grappled with the Missouri Pacific, disorganization and other greater difficulties met him at the outset, but like an able general, he managed his forces until to-day, perfected, finished, the road is a model of strength, power and financial success.

The Wabash will have a good manager, a man whose ability has been "tried and not found wanting," and one in whose list of cardinal virtues there is no such word as fail.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

That the democracy have done well in choosing Grover Cleveland of New York as their standard bearer, is best proven by the character of the opposition with which he was and still is confronted. That a man should be chosen to represent the principles of true and honest democracy, or for that matter the true and honest principles of any party having the welfare of the country and people at heart, who could consort in or find a congenial element with such men as compose the Tammany hall clique, or adhere to Ben Butler, is the height of absurd imagination, as well seek for an ismailite who would surrender his life for love of his fellow men, as well seek in the bottomless depths of hades for an angel of light and purity. That Grover Cleveland is not of these, but of that higher class of statesmen patriots and broad minded class whose countries good and the welfare of its people are to them over and above, any personal end, or tie of kindred or friendship, is well evidenced by the bitter hostility of Tammany by the secret, but active opposition of Butler and disrable of unscrupulous followers, by the haste with which a venal and paid partizan associated press endeavors to suppress the truth of the grand and spontaneous enthusiasm awakened by the announcement of his victory over corruption and political trickery. And it is again evidenced by the unanimity with which good men, irrespective of party, grown tired of the long reign of thievery, jobbery and cruel deception, hasten to recognize in him a fit leader to bring about its overthrow. Of course Mr. Cleveland will have to run the gauntlet of their vile slanders and assassin like innuendoes. But his character is spotless as his record is clear, his courage as indomitable as his principles are fixed, his energy is quick and strong as his principle is unyielding, and the end will be not only to rally to his support every better element of society but a great, grand, sure victory of right over might, reform over corruption, and prosperity over collapse.

So sure as the Idea of November shall come will Cleveland like the conquering Caesar be able to exclaim "Veni Vidi Vici."

If the men who believe that democracy and democratic principles are right, just and essential to the welfare of the country expect to see those principles triumph, they must do something to advance them. It is not enough a man should have convictions and talk them, he must act them, live them, practice them, and encourage others to do so. It is a mistaken idea also, that because Missouri is a sure democratic state all that is needed is to lie quiet until election day and then quietly carry the state. What would be thought of a general, who having an army of 150,000 should allow 10,000 of them to oppose alone an enemies army half so large as his own, while he lay with the bulk of his army idly secure. Those who conquer must be aggressive. If Missouri democrats desire to elect their ticket they must be up and stirring, let them organize and be active, let Cleveland clubs dot the land as leaves on the tree. Seeing your activity will give heart to your brethren in the weaker states, and they will rise and strike and win with you, lie idle and they seeing no enthusiasm at headquarters will grow restless and disheartened and suffer defeat.

And now comes the Post-Dispatch and being duly sworn, upon his oath saith:
"We beg to apologize to our readers for having given place in our news columns yesterday to a stupid falsehood sent us by the associated press from Chicago, to the effect that the Cleveland majority in the New York delegation were in consultation with New York and Albany with a view of withdrawing his name. Our sufficient excuse for publishing it is, that in the pressure for time during a rush of news we cannot undertake here to pass on the truth of news furnished us from Chicago. We should like to give the associated press the benefit of the doubt regarding its honesty in the matter, but, unfortunately, all the evidence points the other way. It was part of a little scheme to which the associated press has lent itself only too freely during the convention. No human being except the agent of the associated press has heard anything of the withdrawal of Cleveland, or of the existence of the Field boom, or of anything indicating a desire on the part of a great national convention to award the presidency on a basis of Western Union Telegraph stock."

And further depont saith not.

From the celerity and promptness with which the usual republican editorials about the "democratic blunders" and the "weakest candidate" being chosen, one is led to suspect they were not only written, but set up previous to the nomination, a space being left for the name of the luckless candidate. They remind us of the story of the big strapping bully who threatened a timid quiet little fellow with a thrashing. Well, said the little fellow, I can stand it if you can, for under any circumstances you will get the worst of it. "How do you make that out," said the bully, "why replied the little fellow if you try it I shall whip you if I can, and if I do not I will get all the sympathy and you all the blame for thumping on one so much smaller than yourself, while if I succeed I shall be praised for my pluck and you will be everlastingly disgraced for letting so small a man club you."

The latest libel on Butler is that accrediting him with having said he "would make a fair square fight for the presidency and if defeated, would forever go out of politics." It is a libel so plain, however, and so contrary to every principle of Butlerism it can do the "cock eyed son of destiny" no harm, because every one will know it not to be true. Butler is no more capable of making a "fair square fight" for anything than he is of "going out of politics," and he is as incapable of going out of politics as he is of getting a free pass to heaven on his past record. When Ben Butler goes out of politics it will be when the devil gets him, and it would not be safe to bet he won't get up a clique to try to beat the old fellow out of the controlling voice in the affairs of Hades when he gets there.

The nomination of Cleveland is a death blow to any hopes may have been cherished that Tammany would support the democratic nominee, but while it drives that undesirable element to its usual assassin like tactics. It draws to democracy all the independent vote of the republican party and that class who honestly desire a reform for the sake of the country and people.

Sedalia needs a young mens democratic club will Messrs. Vest, Lane, Steele, Longan et al see to it. It has one before another Sabbath comes, Cleveland your conquering leader calls. Are you ready to muster, if not when the enemy comes and surprises you unprepared for battle, don't say the BAZOO bugle sounded not its blast of warning. Organize, organize at once.

Sedalia democrats should organize a young mens' Cleveland club. If democracy expects to win it must be up and doing.
